OCCUPY LA MEDIA NEWS

MEDIA CONNECTED

[LOS ANGELES]
Occupy Los Angeles News asked occupiers, "How do you connect?"

Most occupiers connect to media digitally via cell phones, email, palm-sized video cameras, laptops, macbooks, digital photography, video equipment and more. Each of these allows for the creation and consumption of media, which in turn, fuels the OWS movement.

Knowledge brings empowerment. The media originating from this encampment is very impressive on all fronts, and occupiers involved are ensuring that information about this movement is documented and mass-published.

Today, OLA news will show you how some Los Angeles occupiers are media -connected and getting their message out.

Also in today's issue we have printed occupier personal submissions, letters to editors, pictures, etc.

OLA News is always open to journalistic submissions from all points of view within the OWS movement. Thank you for your comments and media, which you can submit online at occupylosangelesnews.com.

We welcome all submissions.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Low income families can contact the FCC's new digital Initiative program run by the nonprofit "Connect to Compete" - connect2compete.org. This spring they will offer low-cost digital equipment and Internet access to some of the 32 million families who currently qualify for school free lunch programs. LA Times.

David DeGraw, who coined the "We are the 99 percent" slogan, said, "L.A. is going to blow up over the next few months and through the winter. The winter is brutal. People in New York are talking about coming out here. We're going to keep pushing, but it's definitely going to slow [OWS] down. You are all going to have to step up. It's your turn to lead the leaderless."

Dear editor,
I totally agree with the Occupy movement, but this pot non-sense has nothing to do with protesting Wall Street. It is a pity drug dealers are taking over the Occupy movement. What is next Meth dealers? This type of drug dealer participation is a big turn off to non-drug users like me.

Clean and sober,
Mickie

Love you guys! Here's some images. Use whatever you want.

You don't just accept the media-filtered version? Heresy. Great shots. Thanks for sharing. Barry

Oh for shitsakes, has occupyLA been turned into a pot movement?

Way to go. Good luck with that. If you cant change the world at least you won't have to deal with the reality of it. Mark
