[LOS ANGELES] OLA News observed today a number of news reports detailing eviction notices being served upon occupier camps across North America.

We reported yesterday on the pending eviction of Occupy Oakland. Mayor Jean Quan and the OPD have not said when they will move in to shut down but have indicated they will.

Mayor Sam Adams has also told Occupy Portland to leave its protest location tonight at midnight or face arrests.

Occupy Wall Street is reporting on its web site occupywallst.org that Nova Scotia officials violently evicted its occupiers on 11.11.11. OWS' account of the eviction is below.

"Right now the police are forcefully [sic] evicting The Occupy movement in Nova Scotia from Victoria park. During a massive rain storm. They are showing no regard for personal property, and throwing entire tents into garbage bags then dragging them through water to be thrown into moving trucks.

When some of the protesters refused to move one man was maced. There have been several arrests. The Occupy movement was supposed to relocate today but that was near impossible in this level of cold wind and rain. Then police swooped in," OWS stated.

HuffingtonPost.com reported today that Occupy Salt Lake City has also been told to get out. The web site said, "the roughly 150 protestors plan to go to jail rather than abandoned the camp."
